

We make your staff fit for the future of the daily business

The training and development of personnel is a decisive measure when it comes to increasing the profitability of your plants and machines. With a custom-tailored technical training course, our experts systematically broaden your employees' know-how. The result: a clear boost in terms of safety in daily operations, as well as a lasting increase in motivation. Further, it leads to an increase in output and product quality resulting in fewer cases of damage and improved plant availability.

We offer you training programs for our entire machine portfolio, as well as the process steps of cement production. We increase the depth of knowledge of your employees: for process engineers, production controllers, maintenance engineers, maintenance personnel, electricians, automation staff, geologist, laboratory personnel, etc.

The content focus of the training courses is on operation and optimization, mechanical maintenance of the machines in the plant, as well as on process control and laboratory automation systems.

We make your employees fit for the demands of your daily plant operations.

From individual training courses for your staff to open seminars as the classic technology-forums, we offer a great variety of possibilities for training and development of your employees. Our methodology is innovative and demand-oriented.

The training courses are tailored to your specific requirements and held at one of our modern training centers, at one of our worldwide thyssenkrupp branches or at your plants. It is also possible to perform the trainings course online as a webinar – also with a remote plant visit on your premises to get a relation between theory and the actual site situation. Make use of our training courses to gain a competitive advantage in the marketplace!

Your employees will benefit from our experience, thus putting you in the position of being able to increase plant efficiency decisively.

We offer you the training courses in several languages and can conduct them throughout the world. Get in touch with us to discuss your specific demands!
